

THE UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA
COLLEGE OF HUMANITIES

Spanish & Portuguese

February 6, 2023

Hispanic & Lusophone Linguistics Working Group

LOCATION:

<https://arizona.zoom.us/j/88190215252>

Password: HLLWG

TIME:

2:00 - 3:00 pm

(hora de Tucson)

HLLWG Colloquium

Explicit pronunciation instruction in Portuguese as an Additional Language for Spanish speakers: effects on the degree of similarity to the native pattern and on the local intelligibility of /s/ and /z/

Raquel Horvath de Andrade, Universidade Federal do Rio Grande do Sul

La proficiencia en la clase de español: ¿Cómo desarrollarla?

Hope M. Anderson, Ph.D., Arizona State University

Raquel Horvath de Andrade

Universidade Federal do Rio Grande do Sul (Porto Alegre – Brasil)

Raquel Horvath de Andrade is a Master's degree student whose research focuses on the phonetic-phonological development on second language and teaching pronunciation on second language, focusing specifically in Portuguese as an Additional Language. She has worked as an English teacher for Brazilians, as a Portuguese teacher for foreigners and is currently teaching Portuguese as a Mother Language in public school.

Hope M. Anderson, Ph.D.

Arizona State University

Hope Anderson is Clinical Assistant Professor of Spanish at Arizona State University. Her research interests include language curriculum development, teacher training, and blended learning. She is currently developing technology to facilitate communicative language lesson plan creation for her startup, Teaching Solved.

For information CONTACT: Hispanic & Lusophone Linguistics Working Group, coh-hllwg@email.arizona.edu

AY22-23 Coordinators Alicia M Brown & Laura Fontana-Soares